The accusation was false. I affirm it on my honor. Nevertheless, on the faith of spies, without honor grief. or character, Austria caused to be arrested, at Semlin, his poor wife, on her way to join her exiled husband, and the imaginary proclamation demanded as the price of her liberty.

Domotor justified himself before the Servian government in so striking a manner, that that government, although only a feeble vassal of the powerful Ottoman empire, found sufficient strength in the justice of his cause to protect him.

Austria was obliged to loose her hold. The poor wife was permitted to join her husband, but upon condition that Domotor should immediately leave

This poor woman is a creditor of Austria. Her entire heritage, the money of the orphan, is in the hands of Austria, not by confiscation, but in trust. Domotor resisted the insolent demands of the Austrian Consul, until the debt due to his wife should be paid. This is his crime. He dared to demand the return of the poor orphan's heritage. The Servian government continued generously to support and protect him for eight months.

But as the Austrian Consul persisted in his persecution, and as the Dragoman of the Pachalik of Belgrade (who is rather an officer of Austria than of the Sublime Porte,) made common cause with the Consul, the Servian government was at length obliged to remove him from Belgrade; but his cause was so just that our government even then gave him permission to reside at Kragujavaer, and continued its protection to enable him to follow up his judicial dispute with Austria.

It was under such circumstances that Major Domotor, seeing the commercial enterprise which he had undertaken in order to support himself and his wife, ruined by this removal, and finding it impossible to provide for the existence of his wife in the city in which a residence was offered to him, was obliged to leave her without money, exposed to die of hunger, to come again to ask my assistance and advice. In about a quarter of an hour, there was a renewed demand on the part of the young girl, and a renewed silence on the part of the artist.

At length, after an hour's standing, the poor girl again solicited for rest; but the artist still remaining obstinate in his silence, the wretched creature fell to the ground almost deprived of sense.

Then Titian, feigning to be in a violent passion, reproved her harshly for having failed in her promise to him, and threatened, with bitterness, to send her from his study without paying her any of the money agreed upon, if she did not instantly resume the position in which he had placed her.

The poor unfortunate, overpowered with humiliation and grief, rose, without saying a word, and resumed her original attitude, abundant and bitter tears silently chasing each other down her pallid cheeks.

"It is done!" exclaimed Titian, in a tone of triumph. "There is, at length, the expression I Then, after a few more touches of his pencil, he

The water courses are still very low, and but little produce. above tide way, finds its way to market. Within the last Chadbourn & Co. two days, however, we have had some heavy rains, which will no doubt swell the streams a little. The Cape Fear River has, we learn, swollen a foot or two, and our small steamers are enabled to make their trips to Fayetteville with more ease than last week. Business generally, dull. BACON.-Sales of several thousand pounds during the week, of Western and North Carolina Bacon at quotations. Stock of latter quite fair, and prices firm. BEEF CATTLE .- We continue last week's figures-Market poorly supplied, and mostly with an inferior article. See table for prices, for a good article of grass or stall fatted.
